Chapter 1 by Matthew Warner

Right lets see who can write the most depressing poem. Have fun trying to top this one!

The Poem of a Lonely Person

Roses are red

Violets are blue

I will never find

Someone like you

You will never be

A part of my life

Just reach to your left

And pass me the knife

I don't have the strength

To do the deed

I cannot prick

And make myself bleed

I will just fight through

Another pointless day

Another person

With the same damaged mind

Together we could share

All our deep fucked up dreams

Until we come to the moment

When one of us beams

This when we realise

That we ought

To be more than just people

Who share some strange thoughts

So we conclude

To make it official

What we had before

We now know was superficial

We went out to dinner

A ring was involved

The two twisted people

Had each other to hold

Next was the paper

We are making it legal

The parents gaze on

Looking so regal

My time alone

Is something I don't miss

Our lives together

They needn't have bothered

Their effort was wasted

A message was left

They should have erased it

But still they come running

To check the lifeless paw

Of the lonely person

Who ended it all

If only I had waited

Those critical days

Into those eyes

I would be able to gaze

But I went too soon

I said goodbye to you all

You're all still there

On our green and blue ball

It's all turning black

Along with your clothes

As you all stand in line

Holding Violet and Rose
